WHERE'S CHARLIE?

Little Quacker was happily swimming about in his pond, when suddenly he remembered that he had not seen Charlie Coyote for a very long time.

"I wonder where Charlie is?" he asked himself. "He must be sick because hardly a day goes by that he is not trying to catch me. Or maybe he is plotting some scheme so he can trick me. Oh well, I guess I'll just forget about him."

Little Quacker was not able to forget, so he decided he had better try to find out where Charlie was and what he was up to.

He asked everyone in the woods if they had seen Charlie, but no one had. Finally Oliver Owl said he had seen the coyote.

"Where? When?" asked Little Quacker.

"Oh, about two weeks ago," said Oliver. "But I haven't seen him since. At the time he looked tired and said he was going to the beach for a rest."

"Humph!" thought Little Quacker. "He never went to the beach before. He must be up to some trick."

Just to make sure, Little Quacker went up to Charlie's cave. Sure enough, there was a sign on the door which said: GONE TO THE BEACH.

For one moment, Little Quacker felt relieved, but then he began to think. He knew Charlie was full of tricks, and he felt sure that this was just another one of them. There was only one way to be really sure. He decided to go to the beach and make very certain that Charlie was there and that he was not up to any monkey-business.

Little Quacker headed for the beach, and when he got there, he walked all over the sand. He did not see any sign of Charlie.

"Maybe it was some sort of trick after all," decided Little Quacker. "Anyway, I am tired, so I think I will just sit down and rest here for a while."

He settled atop a sandy mound, and as he breathed deeply, the mound moved!

"Get off my stomach!" complained a voice from under the mound of sand.

"Ex-excuse me!" stammered the little duck as he flew off to a nearby piece of driftwood.

The mound of sand erupted, and who was buried underneath? CHARLIE COYOTE!

"Can't a guy relax on the beach without some clown perching on his stomach?" he grumbled. Then he saw Little Quacker. "You! What are you doing here?" he gasped.

"I was about to ask the same!" retorted Little Quacker.

"If you must know," snapped Charlie, "I came here for a rest, because I was tired of chasing you! But now that I'm here, I am bored stiff! There's nothing to do."

"Gee, that's too bad," remarked Little Quacker. "You came all this way and all for nothing!"

Charlie slowly pulled himself out of the sandy mound.

"Don't worry, I didn't come all this way for nothing!" he grinned slyly. "Now that you are here, all of a sudden I am not at all bored!"

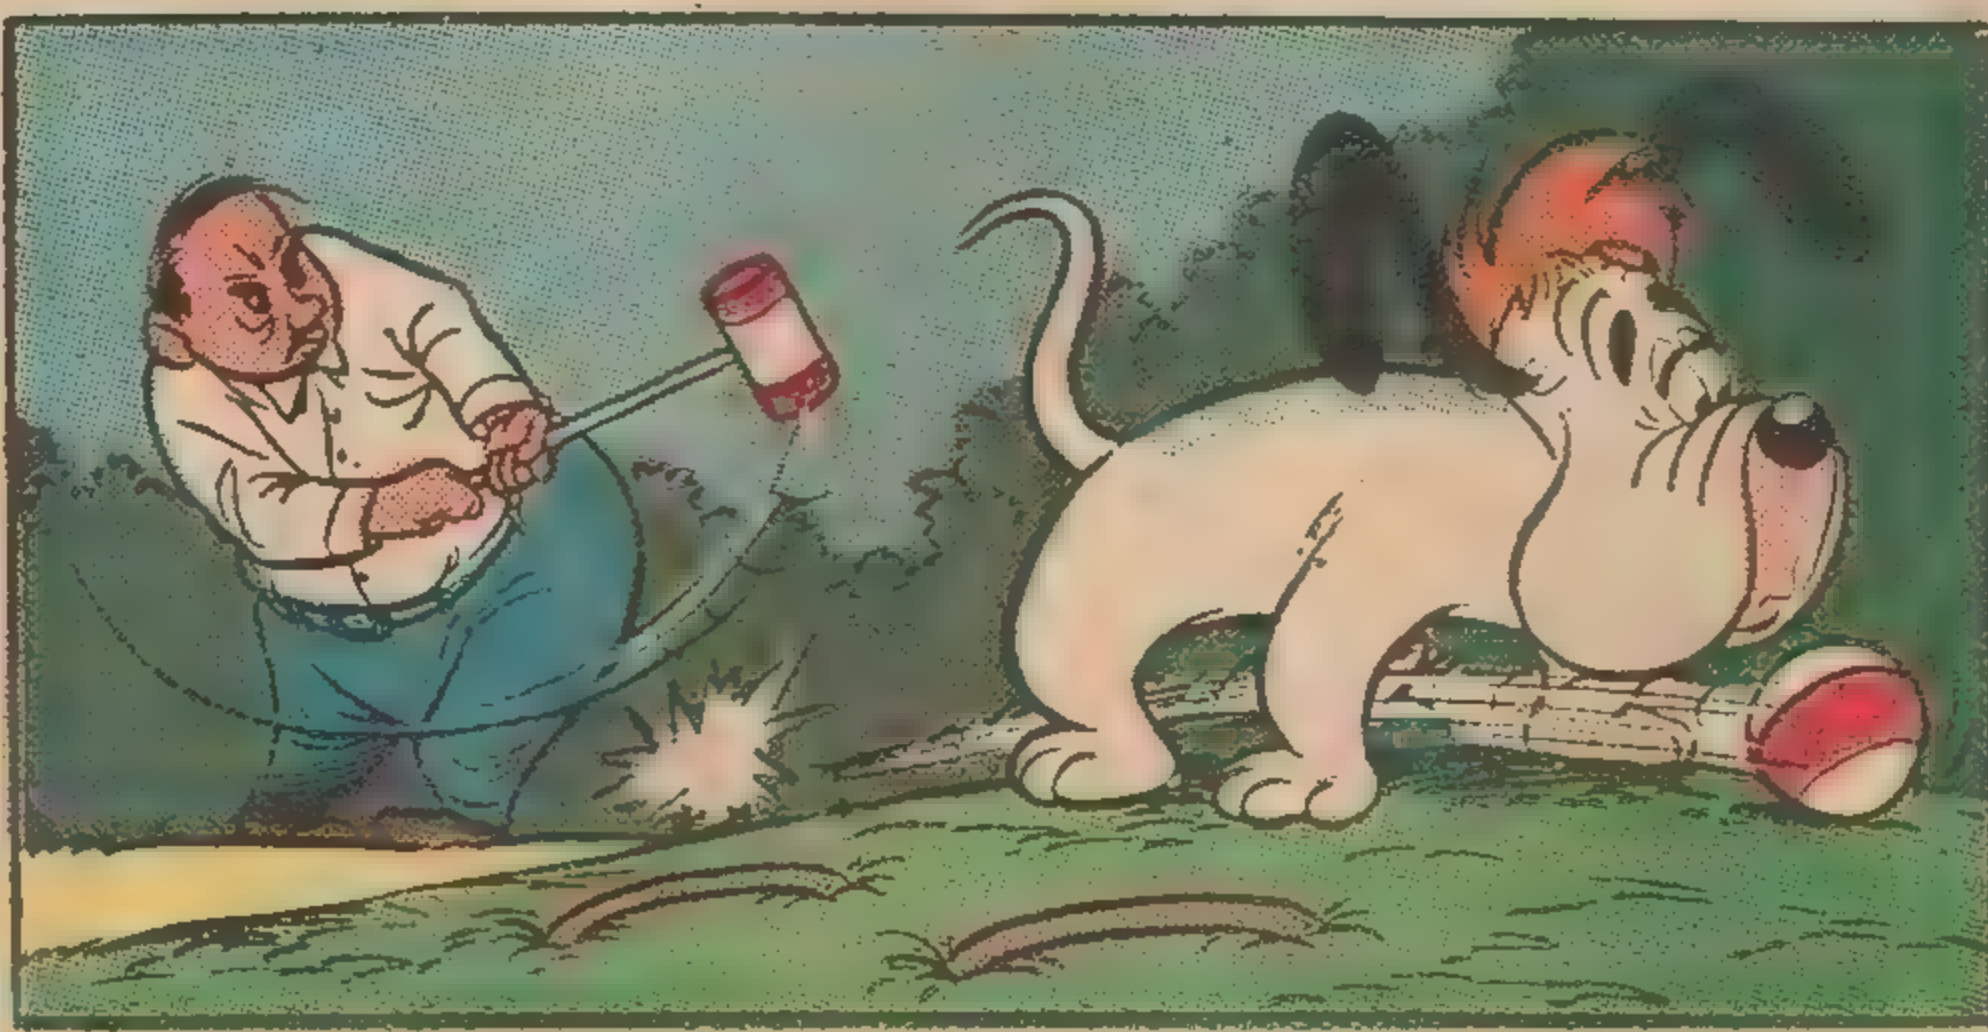

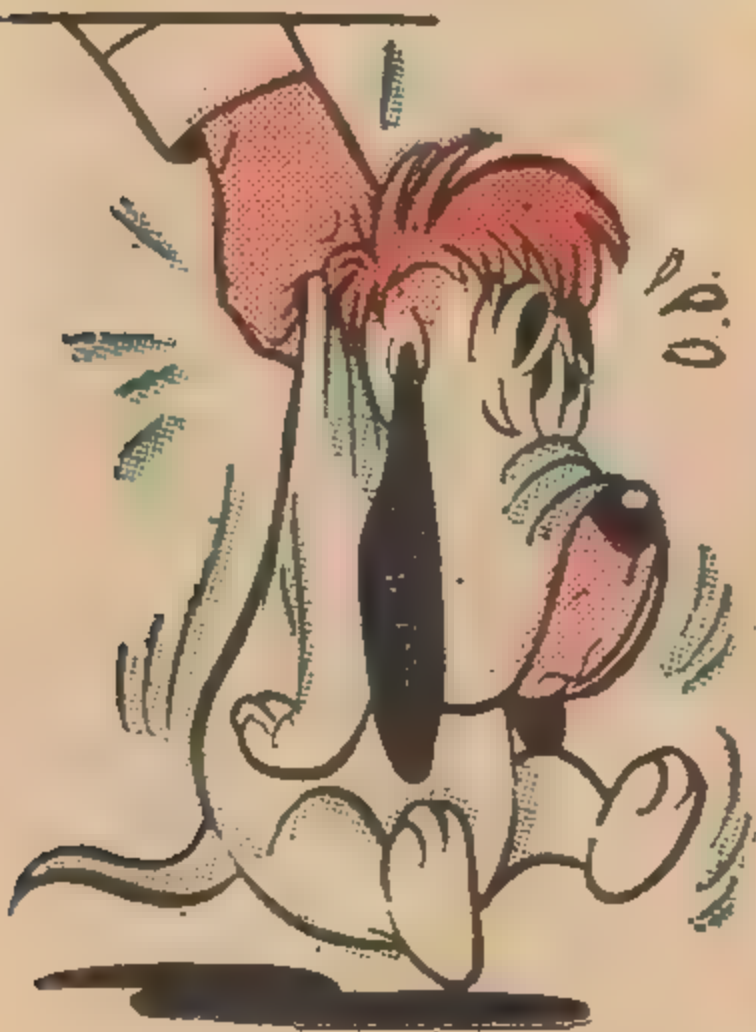

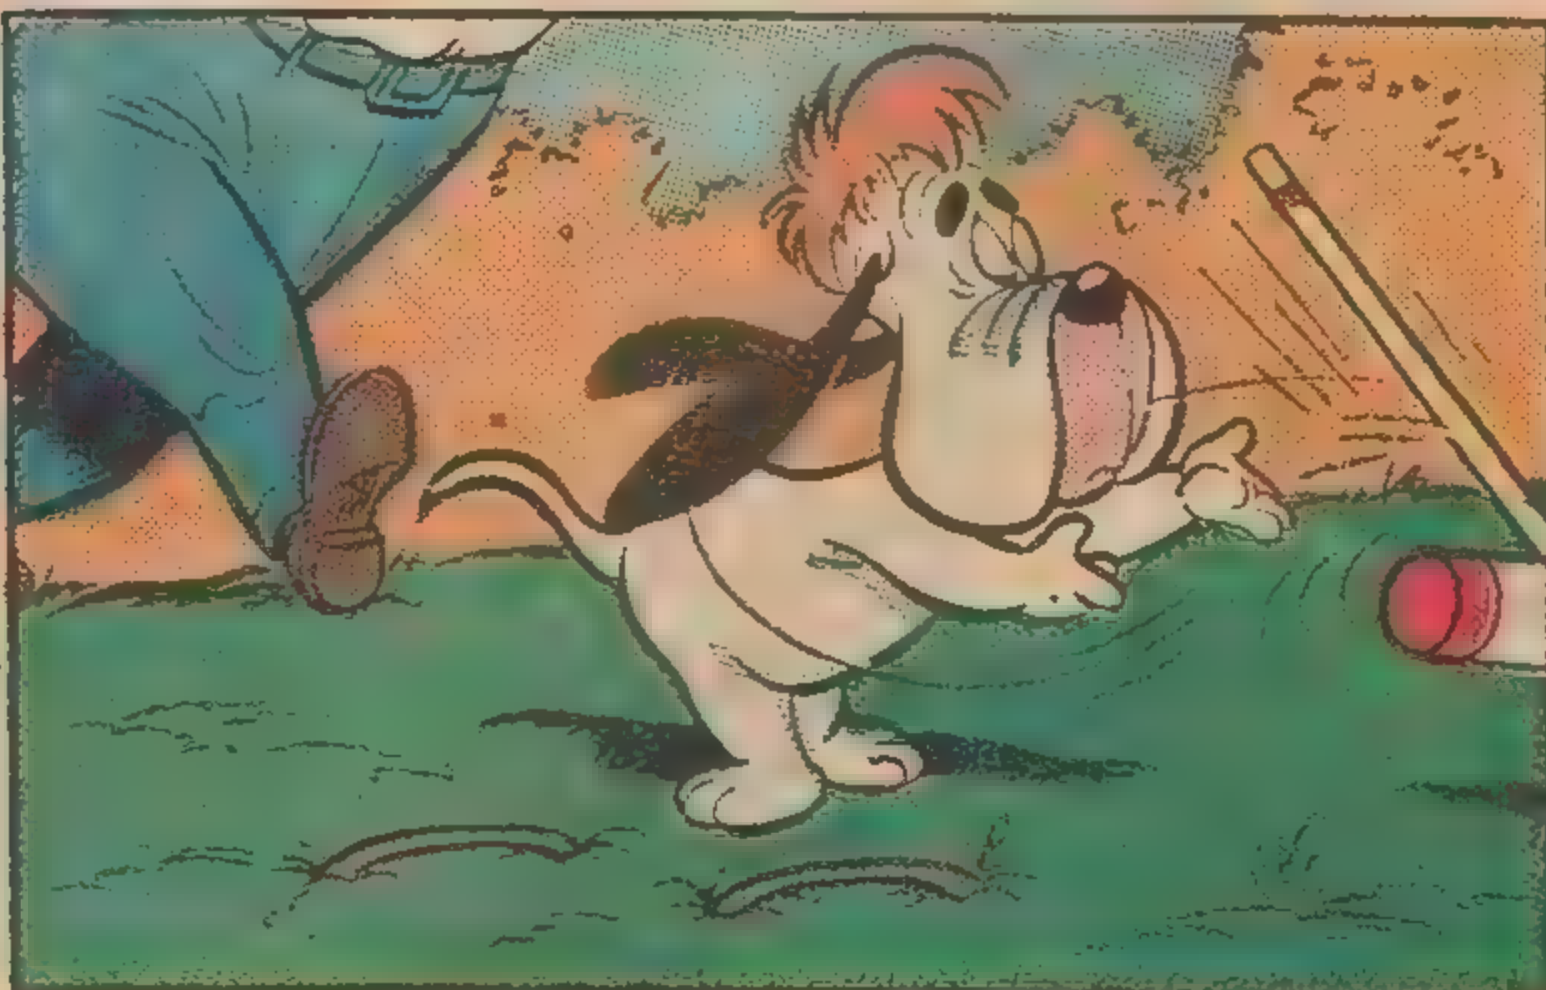

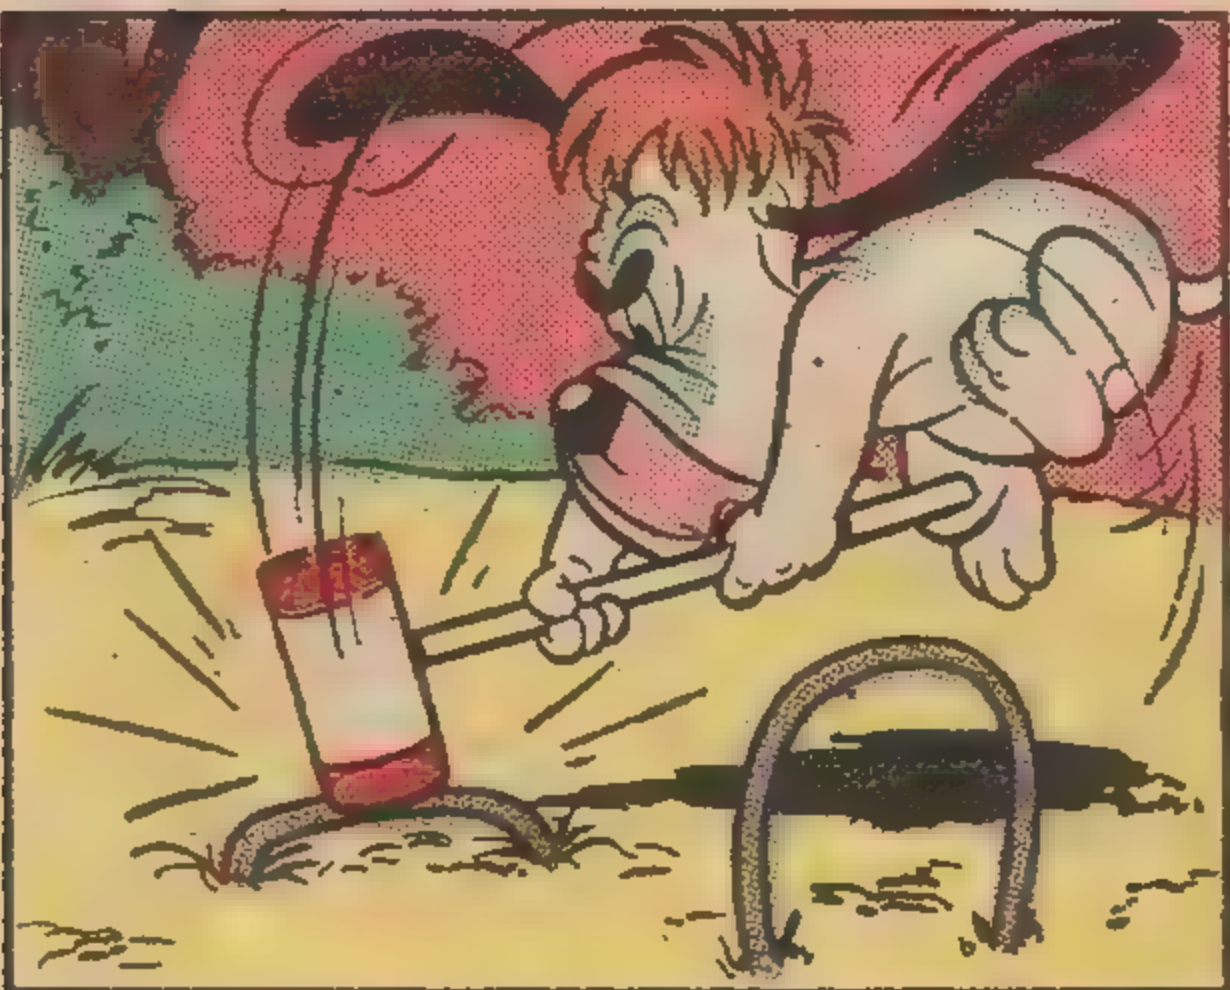

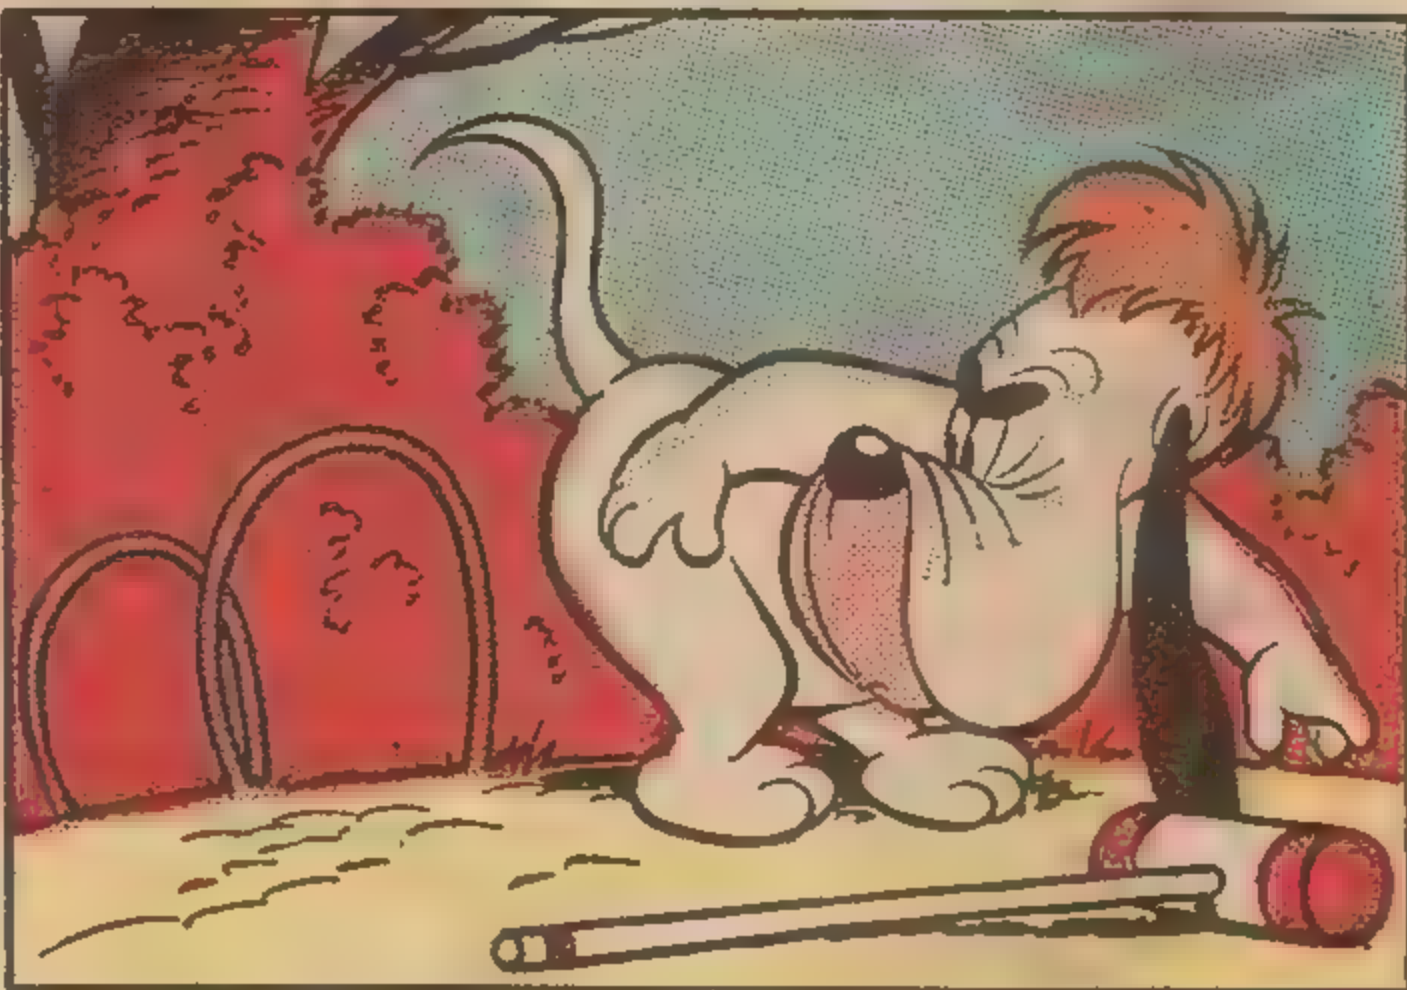

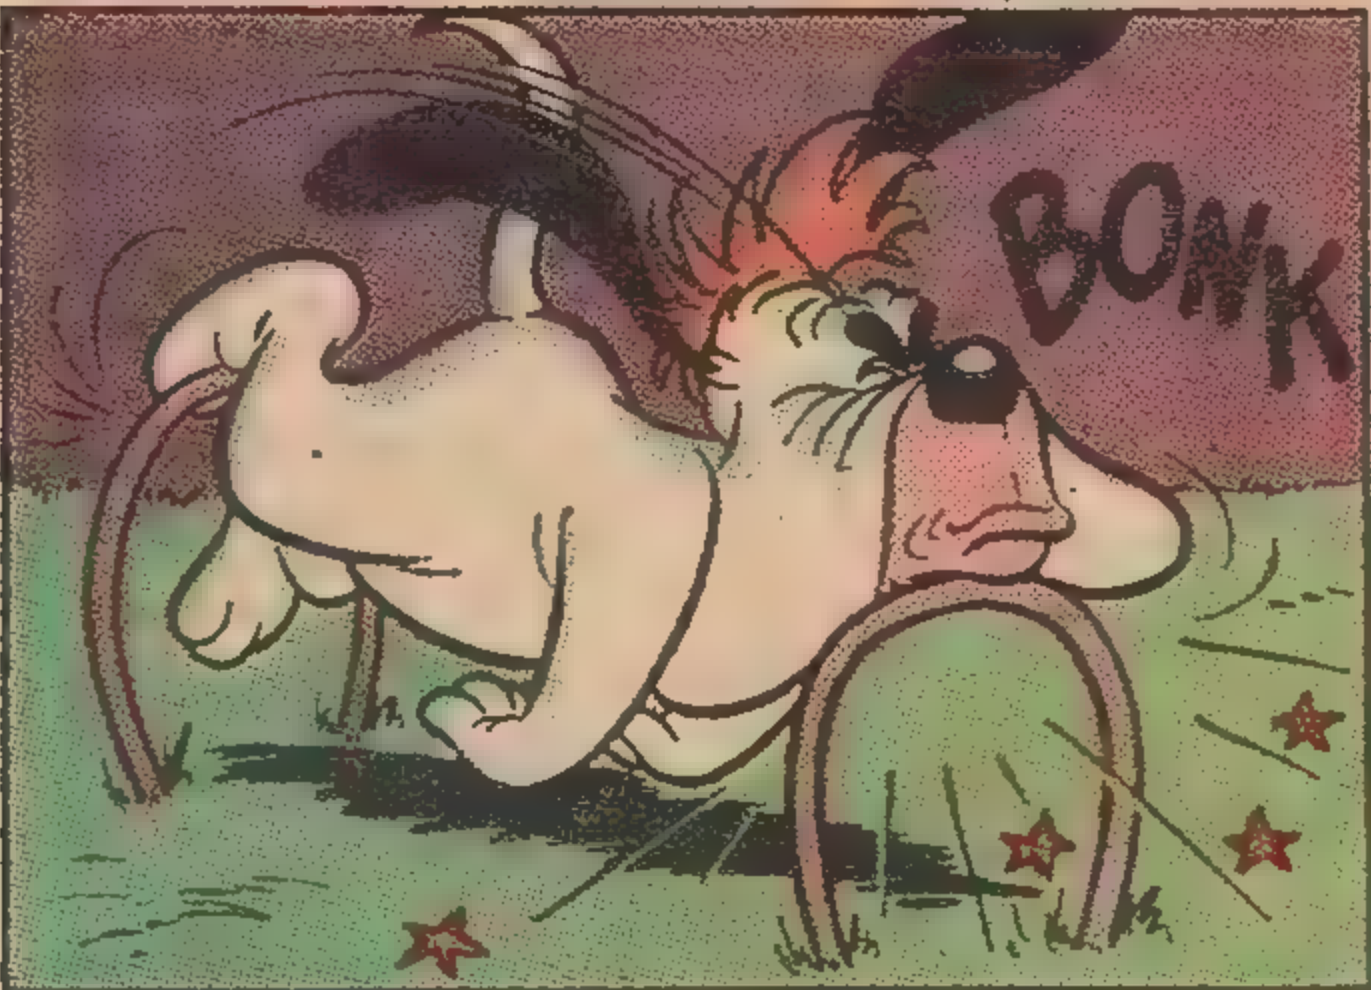

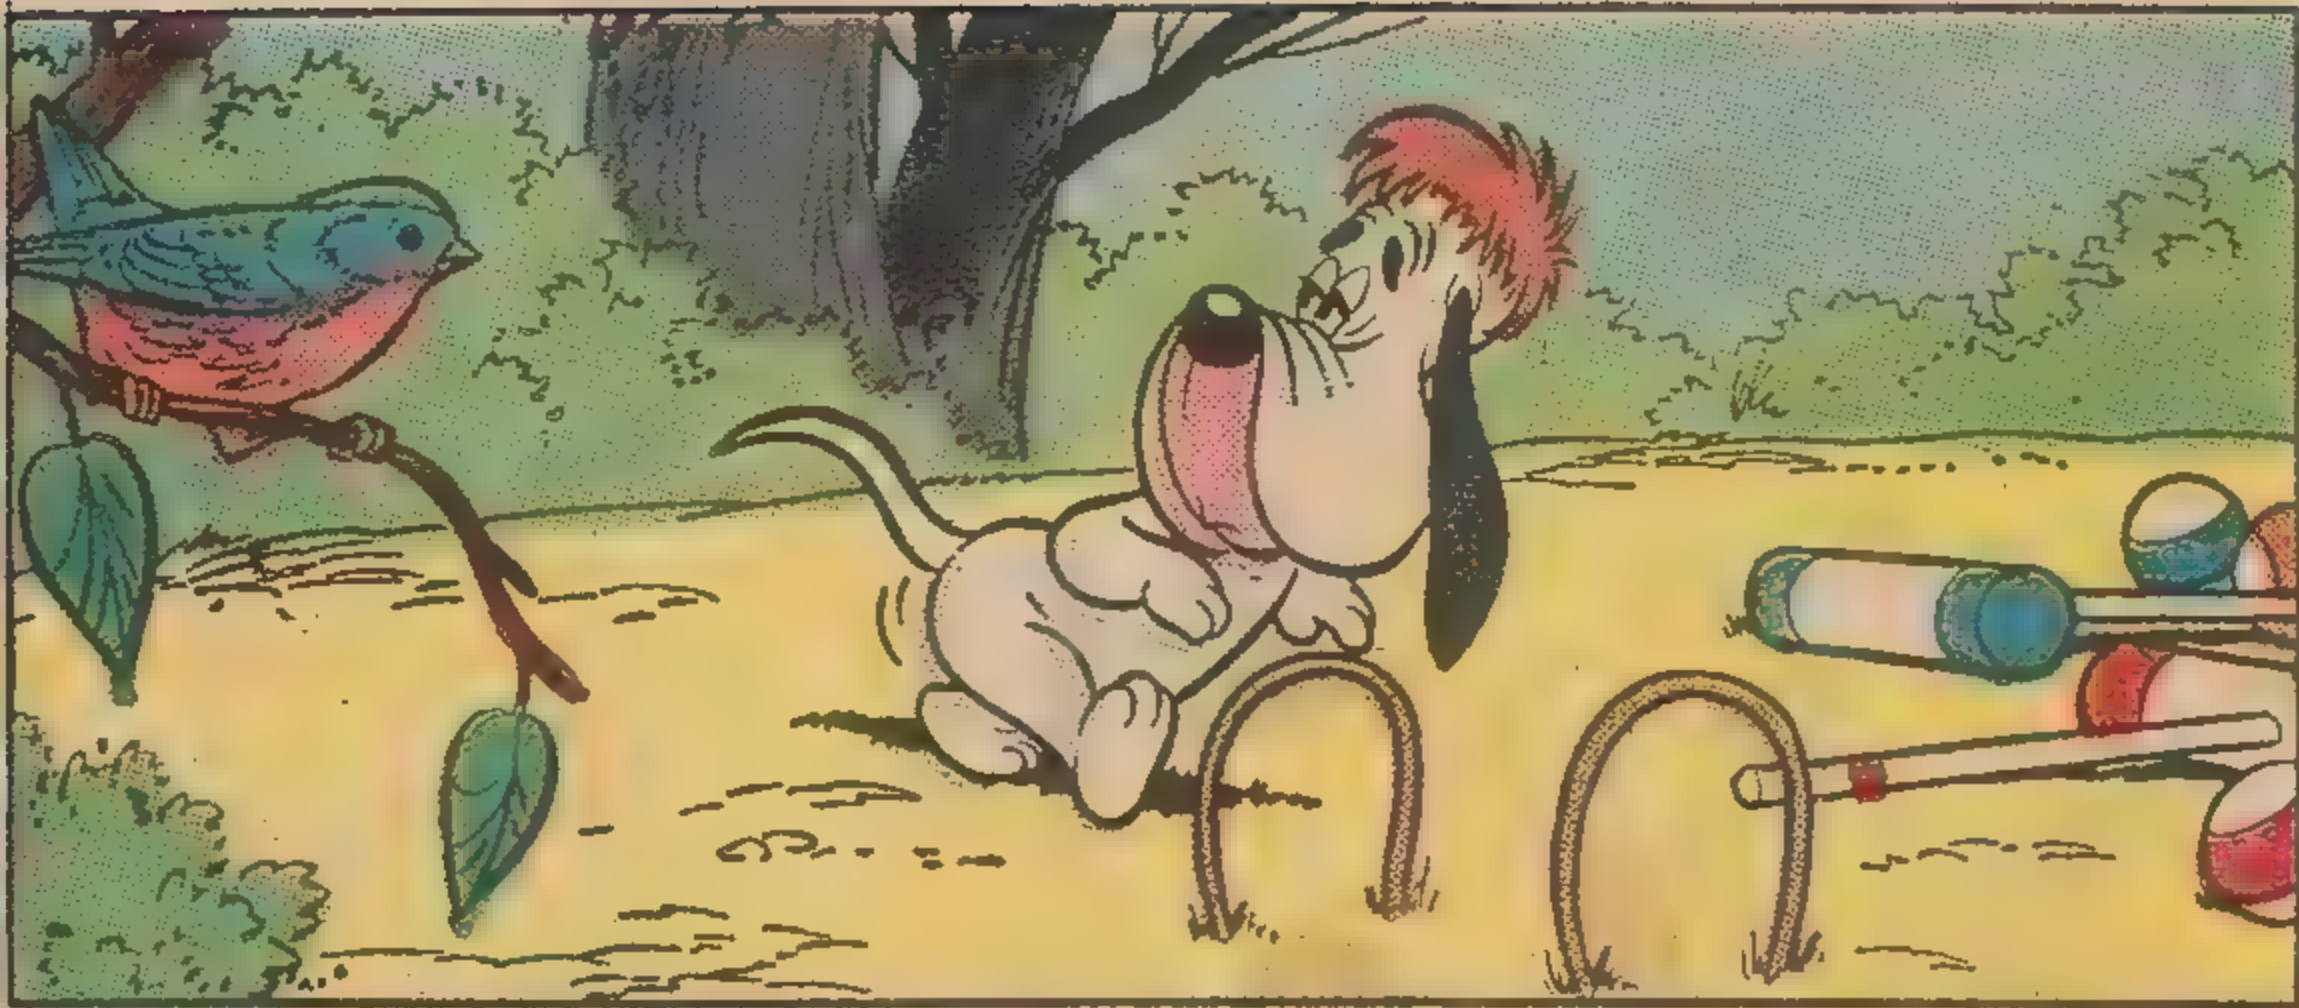

"What do you mean?"

"I'll show you what I mean!" exclaimed Charlie, as he lunged for the little duck. "I just realized that the thing I enjoy most in life is chasing you!"

Round and round they went, all over the beach, and Little Quacker had a hard time keeping out of Charlie's reach.

"Gosh!" he thought to himself, darting off, "let this be a lesson. Next time I wonder where Charlie is, I'm just going to remember the old saying: Let sleeping dogs — I mean coyotes lie!"
